

SELF journal

A powerful yet simple daily planner to help you optimize your day, tackle your goals, and be happier.

CREATED BY
CATHRYN LAVERY & ALLEN BROUWER

OUR PROMISE TO YOU

Welcome to the SELF Journal, where we will empower you to plan your goals, take imperfect action to reach them, and be intentional in your every day.

After spending years looking for the perfect daily planner to plan both long term goals and daily actions, we never found a solution we were happy with. This is why we've decided to create our own. For the past year we used a version of SELF journal to optimize our own daily lives. Once we've experienced how well it worked, we decided to release it out into the world.

People are more likely to use attractive products, which is why we made this book as simple, clutter-free, and minimalist as possible. We hope you utilize this book as a canvas for optimizing your every moment so that you can become your Best Self.

Be amazing every day.

6 Principles

...and why they work.

During the creative journey of crafting this journal into what you're holding right now, we focused on 6 principles that became the blueprint of the design. Every section, every line, and every dot is based upon the proven methodologies within these principles.

1. CRAFT A ROADMAP FOR YOUR LIFE

Goals are meaningless without a plan on how to achieve them. Create a road map toward the life you want by defining your life goals and then building a path toward them. Our 13-Week Roadmap is designed to help you break down these life goals into actionable steps. SELF Journal fills the gap between goal setting and goal achieving by giving you a system of execution that will guide your performance and track your progress daily.

2. ZERO-BASED CALENDAR

Planning is the most crucial part of the formula we call time management. That is why we've added the timeline tracker. It's broken down into 30-minute segments that allow you to carefully optimize your day from sunrise to sunset. Leave ZERO white space on the planner so that you have no unaccounted time. This may sound overwhelming at first as your calendar will be full, but it will allow you to maximize the amount of time you spend each day on pushing you to your goals. This will help you easily transition from one task to the next with laser-focus due to no wasted "in-between" time or decision fatigue.

3. PRIORITIZED, PROACTIVE, PRODUCTIVE

Planning your day and prioritizing your tasks is the difference between having a reactive day and a proactive day. With the SELF Journal, you begin your day with your most critical tasks first. By planning your day the night before (or early in the morning), you can prioritize your workflow. Don't wait; don't delay; don't worry: just get it done.

4. FLEXIBILITY & FREEDOM

Never feel behind. We left everything undated so that you can start planning your goals and becoming your best self today. This isn't about waiting until January 1st to make a change. If you go on vacation or take time off, you can just start back when you return without any awkward blank pages. SELF journal was designed to be flexible and friendly to work with.

5. TRACKING & REFLECTION

Your success in life is the sum of the habits you create. If you look at the most successful people in the world, you will see that they have habits that they practice every day. Whether it's a new habit you want to add to your life or tracking what you're already doing, we have space each day to reflect on wins and learnings, and each week for reflection and habit tracking.

6. BOOKEND YOUR DAY WITH POSITIVE PSYCHOLOGY

Using proven positive psychology fundamentals, we've created space to cultivate a habit of gratitude for each morning and evening. Starting your day with gratitude will give you a happiness boost before any negative worry thoughts can take hold. At night before you sleep, shift your focus to your wins (no matter how small) and the positive parts of your day. This daily practice will help you eradicate negative thought behaviors.

The 20-Mile March

...and the road to greatness.

To reach greatness you must focus on consistent and long term personal performance. In the book Great by Choice, author Jim Collins shares the story of two explorers, Amundsen and Scott, who led separate teams on an expedition race to the South Pole in 1911. The journey there and back was roughly 1,400 miles, which is equivalent to a round-trip from New York City to Chicago.

While both teams would be traveling the same distance as each other through extremely harsh weather conditions, each team took an entirely different approach to the journey.

Scott's team would walk as far as possible on the good weather days and then rest up on the bad days to conserve energy.

Conversely, Amundsen's team adhered to a strict regimen of consistent progress by walking 20 miles every day no matter what the weather. While on good days Amundsen's team were very capable of walking further, Amundsen was adamant that they walk no more than 20 miles each day to conserve their energy.

Which one succeeded?

The team that took consistent action.

By taking consistent action everyday with the 20-mile march rather than spurts of inconsistent action, they made it to the South pole on schedule. Scott's team that only travelled on good days ended up dying on the journey.

“You will never change your life until you change something you do daily. The secret of your success is found in your daily routine.”

The Morning Routine

...and why it sets up your day right.

Ever heard the saying, "How you do anything is how you do everything?"

Well, how you spend the first hour of your morning can set your day up to be a work of art or unruly chaos.

It's not always possible to plan how the middle of our day goes, but we can make a choice about how we begin and end each day to ensure we get our important things done. It's a well known fact that the most successful people in the world, from Benjamin Franklin to Steve Jobs to Evan Williams, know how to leverage their mornings to ensure they start their day on a positive and productive note.

GRATITUDE

Gratitude means counting your blessings, appreciating the simple pleasures, and appreciating everything you have. By practicing a daily habit of gratitude, you will begin to see and think differently, especially during moments when you feel stuck in a rut. Regardless of where you are in your life, your focus can be shifted toward the positive. When we shift our focus from the negative to the positive, it helps us to see the situation more clearly so that we stop worrying, and we open our minds to new solutions. Gratitude can be broken down into three steps: We recognize what we're grateful for, we acknowledge it to be true, and then we take a moment to appreciate it.

Studies indicate that beginning your day with gratitude can rewire your brain to have a more positive outlook on life.¹ Gratitude is a way for us to appreciate our blessings in life and lessen our feelings of constantly failing or shortchanging ourselves. For example:

Today I am grateful for...

- 1. My partner who supports me and has taught me so much about myself*
- 2. Waking up today feeling healthy, happy, and free to live my life*
- 3. My job that allows me to make a living doing what I love*

GOALS

The goals section is a daily space to magnetize your mind toward the goals you're striving for. By expressing and reviewing these every day, you signal to your subconscious mind that your thoughts, actions, and decisions should be directed toward reaching these goals.

We've left the goal section flexible so that you have the freedom to define different goals over time. Some days you'll write your lifetime goals, and other times it will be weekly or monthly goals that you wish to achieve.

“If it’s your job to eat a frog, it’s best to do it first thing in the morning. And if it’s your job to eat two frogs, it’s best to eat the biggest one first.”

~ MARK TWAIN ~

TODAY’S TARGETS

Today’s targets is the section for your Most Important Tasks (MITs). We have limited time and resources, so it’s crucial that we spend our time and energy on the right things.

We tend to take the path of least resistance. When we write a to-do list, it’s convenient for us to work on the easiest things first so that we can cross them off our list; however, you won’t find your success by mindlessly spending your days checking off a to-do list. Prioritized work beats busy work every time.

The most important tasks that will move us forward are usually not the easiest, which is why we tend to procrastinate on completing them. Research has demonstrated that willpower is a finite resource which weakens throughout the day.² If you start your day with easy tasks, then once it comes time to complete the most important (and usually more difficult) of tasks, you will be much less likely to complete them.

Laura Vanderkam describes this phenomenon perfectly in her book ‘What The Most Successful People Do Before Breakfast’³:

“Seizing your mornings is the equivalent of that sound financial advice to pay yourself before you pay your bills. If you wait until the end of the month to save what you have left, there will be nothing left over. Likewise, if you wait until the end of the day to do meaningful but not urgent things like exercise, pray, read, ponder how to advance your career or grow your organization, or truly give your family your best, it probably won’t happen.”

The term “eat that frog,” (which is also the title of a great book on productivity by Brian Tracy) explains how that doing the most important and difficult task on your plate first thing in the morning makes the rest of the day will be a cakewalk in comparison.

When prioritizing my daily targets, here are two simple questions I ask myself:

1. Which task will make me feel the most accomplished?
2. What’s the value in getting this done, and what’s the risk if I don’t?

By prioritizing your tasks and working on the hardest one first, you are much more likely to complete them and build momentum for the day.

DAILY TIMELINE

The key to having a kickass day is to leave ZERO white space on the planner. Have a plan for your time, write it down, and don’t leave any time without a plan or it will be, most likely, squandered. The more white space there is, the more you are not reaching your full potential for the day.

This doesn’t mean working every hour of the day. It means you should be prioritizing your day and making time for important tasks. Want to go to the gym? Plan it into your day. If you don’t, it won’t get done. Want to chat on Facebook? Put a time box around it so there’s no time for procrastination.

It’s not about working without a break all day; it’s about being intentional with your time and where you’re spending it.

The Evening Routine

...how to reflect and recharge to wake up productive.

Having a great evening routine is as important as your morning routine because mastering your evening schedule will set you up for a high-energy and focused tomorrow.

WINS

Benjamin Franklin was famous for his exceptional productivity and rigorous routines. He ended each carefully mapped day by asking, “What good did I do today?”

The wins space allows you take stock of your day and unapologetically brag about how awesome you did. No expectations or thoughts of doing better - only what you did well. Even if it was going to the gym or making that sales call you had been avoiding, this is a way to record all the positive moments - big and small. Making a daily habit of telling yourself the great things you accomplished will grow your confidence in your abilities and improve your relationship with yourself (and others).

LESSONS LEARNED

The goal is to use the SELF Journal is to prime your mind toward the positive. The lessons learned section should be considered an opportunity for reflection on what did not go as well as expected and an opportunity to improve on that area in the future. What will you do if you encounter the same obstacle again tomorrow?

Over time, you will begin to naturally see the opportunities for improvement as you go about your day. This will pattern a new behavior for how you consider problems and actionable solutions where you wouldn't have been able to before.

Consider reviewing the Lessons Learned lists throughout the weeks and months to see how much you have grown and learned.

EVENING GRATITUDE

Take a few minutes before you sleep to write down 3 things you were grateful for from that day. Much the same as the morning gratitude, this is about bookending your day with positive thoughts. Don't be surprised if this small act improves your quality of sleep.

During Dr. Robert Emmons and Michael McCullough's seminal research, they asked people with neuromuscular disorders to write a list of things they were grateful for before they slept. After only 3 weeks, participants reported getting a more refreshing and longer sleep.⁴

Another recent study led by Professor Didon suggests that grateful thoughts can help your sleep. When your mind is consumed by positive thoughts there's not as much room for negative ones, so it's easier to drift off.⁵

By taking a few minutes for gratitude and focusing on the positive, you are keeping the worry and negative thoughts at bay.

“ Early to bed and early to rise makes a man healthy,
wealthy, and wise. ”

The 13-Week Roadmap

...and how to make achieving your goals inevitable

A 2007 research study by British psychologist Richard Wiseman showed that 88% of people who make New Year's Resolutions fail. That is why the SELF journal was created to progress you towards your goal in only 13 weeks, which is approximately a 3-month timespan.

Forget about setting year-long goals, and instead focus on quarterly accomplishments. These can be used to hold you accountable for your long term goals, but in manageable chunks where you can see an end in sight. Giving yourself 13-weeks means you can focus on one goal at a time, knowing that the next quarter can be used for the next goal you have in mind. The purpose of this short term goal is to motivate you into taking action today and not to procrastinate - because your time is limited.

In the 1960s, University of Maryland psychologist Edwin Locke and University of Toronto psychologist Gary Latham discovered that goal setting is one of the easiest ways to increase motivation and enhance performance. Over dozens of studies, Latham and Locke found that setting goals increased performance and productivity by 11 to 25 percent.⁶ By applying this logic to an average workday of 8 hours, it's like getting an extra 2 hours of work into this simply by applying a goal around the activity. Locke's research revealed the nature of the relationship between how difficult and specific a goal was and people's performance on that goal. He discovered that that specific yet difficult goals led to better task performance than vague or easy goals.

The 13-Week roadmap is a goal setting system that follows this concept of setting specific and time-based goals. This concept is implemented by some of the most successful entrepreneurs in the world who know that the key to success is through setting short-term goals then executing and measuring their progress. The 13-Week goal setting roadmap helps you set S.M.A.R.T (Specific, Measureable, Attainable, Relevant & Time-based) goals that can be broken down into actions you will take on a daily or weekly basis.

The SELF journal should serve as your daily reminder of a focused vision to track your results. There are 3 stages to creating your 13-week roadmap:

Result Progress Milestones Actions + Tasks (20 Mile March)

The result stage is setting a high level target you wish to hit. For example, the result could be a revenue goal, customer acquisition number, weight loss goal, etc. It's the goal you want to hit at the finish line. If you were climbing Mount Everest, you can consider reaching the summit as the result. An example of an result goal: "I want to hit $500,000 with my product launch."

The result goals should always be a high level target. Generally, this is where people stumble with goal setting because, after they set a big goal, there's no clearly defined steps on how to achieve it. This is the main cause of why most people fail at New Year's Resolutions - they don't have a plan of work in place for exactly how to get there.

PROGRESS MILESTONES (personal tracking objectives)

Progress goals are very clear and trackable objectives to measure your advancement. When creating progress goals, consider a measurable improvement you would need to make to ensure the desired end result can be reached. For instance, "I will improve my running time to a 6 minute mile," or, "I will improve my sales conversions by 15%." These milestones are directly linked to whatever your result goal is, for example if it's a customer acquisition number, a progress goal like "I will improve my sales conversions by 15%" would makes sense.

If your desired result is to lose 100 lbs, then a progress milestone might be, "I will improve my bench press by 80lbs."

Picture the progress milestones as the basecamps you need to hit while climbing Everest in order to reach the summit. Once you define the end result you desire you need to break this down into progress milestones. Progress milestones are the goals you need to hit to reach your end result.

ACTIONS + TASKS (your 20-Mile March)

The actions stage of the 13-week roadmap includes all of the daily activities or tasks you must complete in order to hit the progress milestones you previously set. Using the Everest metaphor again, consider these steps your own daily 20-mile march that helps you hit the basecamps on the route to the summit AKA your end result.

An example of an action task might be, "Send 50 prospecting emails per day," if your progress goal was about improving sales conversion. For health progress or weight loss goals, it might be, "Do 30 mins of cardio 3 times per week."

These are the items that will go into your daily SELF Journal entries so that you can ensure you are completing everything you need to accomplish each day. By knowing the needed daily action steps, you will also have a clear idea of what you can delegate or outsource to other people. This allows you to focus your time on your highest leverage activity.

THE PURPOSE OF CREATING A ROADMAP

The aviation industry has a guideline known as the 60 to 1 Rule. This rule explains that if you are 1 degree off your designated course, you will miss your target landing spot by 92 feet for every mile you fly. This amounts to 1 mile off for every 60 miles you travel; so, the longer you travel, the further off course you will be.

The same logic applies for your goals in both life and business. By being disciplined and taking strong consistent action in the right direction, you will get to exactly where you want to be. By planning your goals ahead of time and taking actionable daily steps to accomplish on your own personal 20-mile march, you will arrive exactly where you want to be on schedule without being burnt out.

This is why creating goals and setting clear and measurable intentions is so crucial. Use the 13-Week Roadmap to take huge goals and create actionable steps to complete them over a defined time period.

The SELF Journal was created to help you plan your goals and how to reach them while also providing the framework for daily incremental progress. While one of these strategies will help you achieve your goals, the compound effect of all of them will help you get there faster without getting sidetracked by detours.

RESULT

What big goal do you want to achieve in the next 13 weeks? Why is this important to you?

RESULT GOAL:

Hit 200k in revenue with the next product launch

This goal is very important for me to achieve because,

I have created a product that will positively impact many people

PROGRESS

In what ways do you need to progress and advance your abilities or metrics to reach this goal?

PROGRESS GOALS

1. I will improve my sales conversion by 15%
2. I will increase my website traffic by 20%
3. I will increase my email list by 10,000 subscribers

ACTIONS:

Based on Progress Goal #1:

1. Send out 15 prospecting emails per day
2. Make 10 cold calls per day
3. Hire a sales assistant to set up sales calls

Based on Progress Goal #2:

4. Create an editorial and social media calendar
5. Hire 1 content creator and writer
6. Create outreach process to contact 10 bloggers per week

Based on Progress Goal #3:

7. Hire a copywriter for email campaigns and landing pages
8. Run a giveaway to collect emails
9. Learn how to use Facebook ads, udemy course

ACTIONS

Based on your progress goals, what do you need to do on a day to day basis to ensure you are hitting the performance goals you've set?

Congratulations

...you did it!

You deserve a pat on the back, nice work! You completed your first SELF journal, how does it feel?

If you have some time, grab a coffee and take a look back over the journal to see how far you've come. Take note of the lessons you've learned and your personal wins. You've hit a milestone! You've been intentional in planning your day and defining your goals for the past 13 weeks.
